Article writing involves many elements and minor details that join up to make a piece of writing acceptable and presentable. There are certain technicalities involved in the art of article writing. The major component that can improve the quality of the content of your article is hard work and consistency.

The most prominent line of the article is the headline. If the headline is a catchy and attractive one the attention of the reader is grasped and that the first step towards writing a good article. To focus the attention of the reader it is really important to work hard upon making a good headline.

The best way to create a focused and targeted prospects attention is to create as many headlines as they pop up in your mind. Creativity is not a basic factor required while making a headline. Just make a list of them and start picking out they best one. In the end decide upon the topic that is focused specifically towards the subject of the article along with a touch of intrigue and creativity. When you feel that you have made the best headline make sure you consult other people as well. It is always a good idea to take suggestions and comments of a few people before deciding upon a headline. In the end make sure you choose the best one.

Always remember to add the flavour of simplicity to your work. This not only makes the headline short and precise but also makes it attractive. If your headline is a successful one and your content is not that outstanding even then your article has chances of being rated as a good article because it at least full fills the criteria of capturing the attention of the targeted audience.
